FALL / WINTER 2008 CALENDAR

Christians in the “Public Square”

There seems to be quite a bit going on in our world: the winding down of the war in Iraq, the tensions with Iran, and the escalation in tension with Russia and North Korea, the failing of the housing industry and finally the shakiness of the banking industry.

We seem to have been spared a repeat of Katrina with the last two hurricanes, even if Ivan did leave behind a measure of destruction in Texas.

With all these world events happening as a backdrop, we also have an election coming up very soon. I don't know about you; but even though I have been following the presidential race, things didn't seem to shift into high gear until the Civic Forum at Saddleback Church with the candidates answering the questions posed to them by Rick Warren.

The Civic Forum was very helpful in that it gave America the chance to really understand the character of each candidate and what their worldviews are.

I want to focus in on how we should respond to the presidential race as Christians. Some Christians believe that we shouldn't even concern ourselves with politics since this is not our real home anyway. Others think we should hold the Bible in one hand and the Constitution in the other. So what is our response in the “Public Square?” The “Public Square” used to mean that all of the town's people would meet in the center of town or the “Public Square” to discuss important issues that would affect everyone in the town.

It seems today that we as Christians at the very least, should exercise our public service and vote. Paul was a citizen of Rome and it appears he followed the rules and laws of the Roman Empire as well as his Jewish faith.

When we use our vote we should know all we can about the person or persons for whom we are casting our vote. I would encourage you to gain knowledge about the candidates from places like townhall.com, ouramericanvalues.org, focusonthefamily.com, and others like these.

The main stream media will not give the entire picture that we need in order to make intelligent, informed decisions in using our vote wisely.

I want to stress and encourage you to vote for a candidate not by what they say, but by what you can discover about who they are as people, what their worldview is and by what their record has been while they have been involved in politics.

As Christians we want to honor Christ in all that we do and this includes being responsible citizens of one of the greatest countries on earth.
